A Celebration of American Craftsmanship

G&L Guitars · Fullerton, California USA

Fine musicians who have played every kind of guitar over the years are feeling again long-forgotten excitement and thrills as they play G&L instruments.

In this cynical era, the little G&L factory in Fullerton, California—the town where these kinds of instruments were born—seems like a throw-back to a simpler romantic age. These Californians, with love, dedication and great skill, slowly and painstakingly give shape, form and voice to the G&L instruments.

There are no computer driven robots popping out guitars with uniform precision but no soul. At G&L, people make instruments, and many of these people are skilled musicians themselves. Each craftsman imparts some of his or her own personality and soul into each instrument. Guitars made this way have a life—a vitality—that responds to the player like no other.

Instruments from G&L, the company founded by Leo Fender, epitomize authenticity and integrity of design, engineering and craftsmanship.

“In the distinguished tradition of its founder, G&L has perpetuated the art of fine instrument making”
